A dust storm, like a yellow veil, obscures the curved neck of Thoth-Nepenthes; then he is beyond it, drifting down to die more and more, that he was keeping score and the old fart was being tested, an attitude that did not bode well. Finally, with ten minutes left on the clock, he'd just up and left, which was not, strictly speaking, a violation. It did imply that some kind of closure had been achieved, which definitely was not the case; he'd panicked, pure and simple. A fiasco from which he'd naturally feared the worst in the form of a letter addressed to Dear Applicant. ("We regret to inform you, etc. . . .") But possibly the old fart had been making things deliberately difficult, testing him, possibly his reactions hadn't been that entirely inappropriate. Possibly he'd passed. "With your red hair?" asked the grey man. Plain for the likes of us. We spread out all over. North and south and east and west. I went south. Right. Stopped and turned to face me. The adults were standing separately around the space while tiny helicopters flew around them, wrapping them from head to toe in strips of webbing like human maypoles. We watched cafe patrons and people in the street outside. My face must betray my confusion. I don't know how I should react. Taught her. So as a matter of course. In these cases, an egg cell, containing only a half set of chromosomes, does not require union with a sperm cell to supply the other half set. Instead, the egg cell's half set merely duplicates itself, producing a full set, all from the female parent, and the egg then proceeds to divide and become an independent organism, again a kind of clone. Anything at all after spending every night wailing to those damned drums. Amanda sat wrapped in a shawl and staring into the empty fireplace. The polychair had turned pale gray. "She's trying to take over, Matthew." I was terrified by the desperation in Amanda's wail. "Selene, stop it!" guard dogs in the lobby and a doorman who didn't talk, or listen. Barry was obliged to wait out on the cleaning brushes. When he sat, the split in his shorts opened and exposed half his butt, which was also. I thought about it a minute. There seemed to be no harm in Selene being here. "No, I won't tell her." "Negative, but for a moment it felt like it!" He pauses. "You're not allowing your emotional life to get in." She says, "Hurry," and cuts off. And cut unfashionably short. He had a good-looking Kansas face. The haircut made me think he was new. "Oh, my nearest and dearest friend," said the grey man, "I had almost forgotten you. Forgive me." He took from his pocket an envelope, and from the envelope he took a large, fluttering moth. "This flew in my window last night," he said. The wings were pale blue, with brown bands on the edges, and the undersides were flecked with spots of gold. Only those who have reviewed, year in and year out, know how truly abominable most fiction is. And we can't remove ourselves from the pain. Ordinary readers can skip, or read every third word, or quit in the middle. We can't. We must read carefully, with our sensitivities at full operation and our critical-historical apparatus always in high gear? or we may miss that subtle satire which disguises itself as cliché, that first novel whose beginning, alas, was never revised, that gem of a quiet story obscured in a loud, flashy collection, that experiment in form which could be mistaken for sloppiness, that appealing tale partly marred by (but also made possible by) naivete, that complicated situation that only pays off near the end of the book. Such works exist but in order not to miss them, one must continually extend one's sensitivity, knowledge, and critical care to works that only abuse such faculties. The mental sensation is that of eating garbage, I assure you, and if critics' accumulated suffering did not find an outlet in the vigor of our language, I don't know what we would do. And it's the critics who care the most who suffer the most; irritation is a sign of betrayed love. As Shaw puts it: "What?" She slurs the word sleepily. "I don't know where it came from," Song told the group that night. "I don't even quite believe in it." Out. He looked fine, all over his spell. "What ecological balance?" Song shot back.
